

I oppose loosening the rules designed to promote and protect diversity of media ownership. These rules were adopted to ensure that the public would receive a diverse range of viewpoints from the media, and not simply the opinions of a handful of media conglomerates.

There has been a marked decline in the quality and content of broadcast "news" in the last decade, with fluff, self-serving features and air-headed chatter obscuring the biased and inaccurate information sandwiched inbetween. The FCC has failed the American public. Big Brother, disguised behind Survivor and an endless diet, has arrived with little fanfare. I implore you to return to your mission of serving the public good, or at least remember that the concept exists.
